Technology Errors & Omissions

Product Fact Sheet

It is important for technology companies to carry insurance coverage against any errors or mistakes in their services or products that could financially harm clients, users or other third parties. For example, if an error in their service or a failure to meet a required standard caused a client's computer system to fail, they probably would not be covered by a Commercial General Liability policy for those resulting claims. For proper protection, they would need Technology Errors & Omissions insurance, and our underwriting team with over 20 years of Professional Liability experience are well positioned to assist you and your clients. Further, Technology Errors & Omissions Liability should not be confused with Cyber Liability, which protects technology consumers – not manufacturers or retailers – from privacy breaches and attacks.
